

Sue Kasse, Executive Director

September 1990 will go down in my history book as one of the most outstanding months in my period as Executive Director of this Association.

On Thursday, 13 September, ALIA House was officially completed, and the keys were handed over by the builder, Kell & Rigby, to the Association. Members of the Building Project Team, Averill Edwards, Ian McCallum and myself, and the Project Manager, Bill Rushton, were on hand to accept the keys.

On Friday, 14 September, the contract with the tenant of ALIA House was also finalised. The income from this tenancy will cover the loan repayments for the Association, and end the uncertainty over the financial viability for the entire project.

The building will be officially opened on Friday, 23 November 1990, and every member will be invited to this special occasion for the Association. The last issue of inCite for 1990 will focus on the Grand Opening and the celebrations.

September 1990 will go down in my history book as one of the most outstanding months in my period as Executive Director of this Association.

With all of the handover excitement close behind us, the national office will begin its move into ALIA House on Friday, 21 September. The move will be completed on Wednesday, 26 September; the day before a number of national office staff begin their next exciting adventure to the 1990 Conference in Perth.

The Association has been able to achieve not only on the building front, but on a number of other fronts as well.

Permanent paper

The Association, and in particular, the previous Publications Board, have lobbied the Federal Government to print parliamentary publications on permanent paper.

In line with recent government media releases, I have received the following statement from the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Mr Leo McLeay, MP:

'As a result of changes in price levels, it has been possible for the Australian Government Publishing Service to use permanent paper in the printing of Bills which form the basis of the Assent copies of Acts. This change is to take effect as soon as the stocks of old paper are utilised. Because of the small print run involved, it has also been possible to have the Votes and Proceedings of the House published on permanent paper from the first issue of the new Parliament.'

Mr McLeay added that as the price of permanent paper approaches non-permanent paper, a changeover to the use of permanent paper in that of other Parliamentary publications of record will be considered.

The Joint Committee on Publications

This photograph brings together (almost) all of the Vice-Chancellors and University Librarians of the NSW Universities.

1. Barrie Mitcheson, Macquarie University; 2. Christine Henderson, University of NSW;

3. Bill Linklater, Newcastle University; 4. Virginia Chadwick, NSW Minister for School Education; 5. John Shipp, Wollongong University; 6. Karl Schmude, University of New England; 7. Aileen Stevenson, University of Western Sydney; 8. Russell Cope, Parliamentary Librarian; 9. Neil Radford, University of Sydney; 10. Prof. J Ronayne, University of NSW; 11. Prof. C Blake, Charles Sturt University; 12. Prof. D Yerbury, Macquarie University; 13. Prof. K Morgan, Newcastle University; 14. Prof. R Guthrie, University of Technology, Sydney; 15. Mr J Johnson, NSW Legislative Council; 16. Prof. I Chubb, Wollongong University; 17. Prof. T Field, University of New England; 18. Prof. B Smith, University of Western Sydney; 19. Prof. D McNicol, University of Sydney.

has been asked to enquire into, among other things, the costs and practicality of CD-ROM as a storage medium for Parliamentary documents.

National Policy on Languages

The Association, and in particular, Derek Whitehead, has been a strong supporter of the need for a balanced and comprehensive national policy on languages, including funding for the public library network. Some $4 million for public library funding, has been included in the proposal to continue the work of the National Policy on Languages for the coming 3 years. In the first 3 years operation of this policy, there was no funding for public library support.

The Prime Minister in his March 1990 speech Foundations for the Future reaffirmed the Government's commitment to the National Policy on Languages.

In August 1990, the Department of Employment, Education and Training advised the Association that the Australian Advisory Council on Languages and Multicultural Education (AACLAME), with Joseph Lo Bianco as its chair, will continue to advise the Government until June 1991, while future policy directions are being considered. Derek Whitehead is the Association's representative on AACLAME.

Advancing your career

The Information Session for RMIT Department of Information Service's innovative Master of Business program is on 31 October 1990 (5.30 pm Institute Function Room, RMIT).

Most students completing this Masters program at present gain maximum advanced standing with a relevant graduate diploma or 4 year undergraduate program. This means that they are able to complete the program in 2 years of part-time study, or 1 year full-time.

With studies available in information and library management, business information systems and management development, this program is aimed at middle level library and information professionals who wish to advance their careers.

Emphasis in class and assignment work is on real-life situations, with students being encouraged to work on projects of relevance to their work or aspirations.

Most subjects are studied in 'condensed mode' over weekends and public holidays, which suits the largely part-time student group. This approach has enabled students who live at a distance from RMIT to complete the program. Among the 45 part-time students currently enrolled in the program, three come from Adelaide, one from Wagga and several from country Victoria. One student from Brisbane has taken 10 months' leave to complete the course on a full-time basis.

The Master of Business (Information Technology) program has an annual intake of 25-30 students each year, together with 30-35 students in the Business Systems stream. Students from both streams study a number of subjects, including the management development cluster in mixed groups.

Enquiries are taken at any time. For brochures contact: Helen Harvey (03) 660 3057 or to arrange an appointment with staff contact Marianne Broadbent (03) 660 2562 or Barry McIntyre (03) 660 3053.

P.D.Q.

Professional Development Questions

Ever since Eve was a girl, people in the same line of business have got together to share, compare and compete. Professional development, continuing education, training and development, call it what you will, librarians have always chosen to keep themselves up-to-date, formally or more often informally, particularly in times of change. This comfortable state of laissez-faire however, is changing. Now read on...

Industrial background

In the industrial arena as a result of structural efficiency/award restructuring, much has changed. In the many awards which cover library workers, library occupations have been grouped together with other occupations requiring similar skills and educational levels into broad bands. For example in the Australian Public Service, there are common pay levels for all professional occupations including librarians. By and large this has been beneficial for librarians, as their pay has been increased to the level of other professional employees; however, library technicians have not been treated consistently within these different awards.

Developing professional development

Award restructuring also emphasises the establishing of skill-related career paths which provide an incentive for people to continue gaining skills through education and training. Skills are thus of prime importance at present — particularly multiskilling, where a person gains new skills which were previously regarded as separate, or deepens existing skills (horizontal or vertical skilling).

Competency-based training, provided in modules which can be linked together to form a qualification, involves a precise definition of the skills to be achieved. It is used for both on-the-job and off-the-job training, and is accompanied by certification awarded for successful performance of a skill.

Training Guarantee Scheme

There are various rumblings in the education sector while these changes are digested. In the meantime the federal government is concerned that the existing workforce also enjoys multiskilling and retraining. Its aim is to create a Training Culture in Australia, a culture where

Job Exchanges

Location of library

London, UK

Position available for exchange

School librarian

Position required in exchange

Similar

Location desired

Sydney

Duration

1 year

Contact

Allison

telephone (048) 89 8356
evenings/weekends

National Centre for Australian Studies

GNAB

THORPE

PDQ continued 10...